There are more than 500 chapters in the United States, and chapter regents have been appointed for England and Canada. The presiding officer of the national society is the president general, and there are in addition a number of executive officers and 20 vice presi-

the parent body.

The praiseworthy aim of the Daughters of the American Revolution is to perpetuate the name and memory of the men who fought to establish American Independence, to acquire and protect historical spots and elect monuments thereon, to encourage historical research and preserve the memorials of the Revolutionary era. The Daughters of the American Revolution is an energette society and has in its ranks some of the most prominent American women, who are proud of their membership.

The present contest in the Daughters of the American Revolution is caused by the question of the advisability of centralizing more strongly the organization or of leaving to the individual chapters great freedom of action. Naturally, the two policies have brought into the field candidates favoring either side. The present Incumbent of the presidency, Mrn. Daniel A. Manning of New York, the widow of the former secretary of the trensury, is in favor of a centralized organization. Mrs. Manning has already served two consecutive terms as president and cannot be re-elected unless another term intervene, according to the constitution of
